Ancient Rome refers to the visual arts made in Ancient Rome, which were influenced by the ancient Greeks. The development of Roman art and architecture is closely tied to the political and social changes that occurred throughout the empire. Ancient Rome was a center of art and culture, with a strong emphasis on practicality and functionality.

The ancient Romans were practical people. They wanted their art and architecture to be useful. Although the practical uses of art were distinctly Roman, the art forms themselves were influenced by the ancient Greeks and Etruscans. Although the Etruscans imported Greek styles of art, they achieved much by themselves.
