The Forestport Breaks: A Nineteenth-century Conspiracy Along The Black River Canal

Michael Doyle

flows southwest from the Adirondacks, draining North Lake. waters in the thick of the story about the Erie Canal and state politics at the end of the 19th century. Cities along the canal, especially Utica, were rife with people who charged tried to show that much of the town was involved in the conspiracy.